The neighborhood of Sixth and Cary streets has recently become a nest of im-provements. Among the most substantial of these improvements are Valentine's new meat-works, which are at once the outnew meat-works, which are at once the out-growth of a necessity that has arisen for the fourth time for increased accommodations for Mr. Valentine's enterprise, and a provision for any future extension of his business. The buildings front 78 feet on Cary street, and run back 160 feet along the line of Sixth street to an alley. To the right of the hall are three large rooms, separated from each other by glass-doors and sash partitions. The first of these rooms is the main business office, the second a private office, and the third is a lunchroom, the latter being a necessity owing to the fact that the process of making the meatluice requires such close attention that those in charge of the different departments cannot leave the building for meals. These rooms are also finished in oiled and ENTERING THE MAIN BUILDING These rooms are also finished in oiled and varnished heart-pine, and ornamented with pulsaters, which, with the mantels, are gracefully carved. From the hall a winding staircase, with mahogany foot-post and wainut banister, leads to the floor above, while under the staircase is a large fire and burglar-proof vault. On the left of the had and communicating with it by a large door is a high-pitched room 25x50 feet, used as a stock- and packing-room. From the rear of the stock-room a short flight of steps leads the visitor down into which is an annex to the main building, 45x50 feet, with a pitch of 25 feet, and is well lighted and ventilated both from the sides and the roof. This room is in charge of Mr. Ira W. An Exciting Scene on the Streets of Albany-Hacked with a Razor.

An Albany special of Thu sday says: At neon to-day John Swift, a mason, entered his nouse and sent his wife for a pint of ale. On her return, as she was entering the door, he picked up a razor and without saying a word made a dash at her throat, and so perfect is the machinery (most of which is built after Mr. Valentine's own designs) that it makes but little noise. RECESS UNTIL FALL.

At Resedale, the residence of Mr. William H. Clarke, four tales from this city, in Hearico county, the clouds Thursday evening seemed to meet, and the discharge of lightning was territic. Mr. Clarke was standing in his yard, viewing the approaching storm, when most unexpectedly from a clear sky overhead a boilt struck the oak tree he was under and nearly prostrated him to the ground from the effects of the shock. The large barn-yard oak near by was struck twice in quick succession, and shivered from top to bottom. The cornerib was blown from its supports, fences levelled, and trees generally wrecked. The fall of hall and rain was the greatest, old residents say, that has visited this section red tail of half and rain was the greatest, old residents say, that has visited this section since the war. The rain was much needed, and has proved a great blessing to the arrivelled corn and vegetables.

An Old Violin.

Lovers of concord, who like a genuine instrument of that class most capable of producing the greatest variety of sweet sounds, should see an old violin now in the possession of Mr. A. Eichel, of this city. It is of the celebrated Nicola Arniti make, and was manufactured la 1559, and is still a fine fiddle, worthy of the best fiddler. Mr. Eichel brought the instrument with him when he emigrated from Alsace, then France, now Germany.

Mr. Gibson opposed this. If there was a surplus fund in the asylum treasury, why was $20,600 asked for ? Furthermore, he had understood that under the present management there were almost as many officials as there were lunatics, and, beside, he Nearly every Methodist church in the State has a Rosebud Society in connection with the Sunday school. The object of the organization is to develop a regular system of Christian benevolence among the children, and to rid the general missionary work of the church. There was a large assemblage of Sunday-school workers at this meeting, all of whem seemed delighted with the proceedings of the day. The hospitality of the people was more than equal to the occasion.

Yesterday evening the mortal remains of D'Arcy Paul Morton were said away in Yesterday evening the mortal remains of D'Arey Paul Morton were laid away in Hollywood by sorrowing relatives and triends. The funeral took place from the Centenary church, and the pall-bearers were Messrs. Norman Walker, David Walker, Egbert G. Leigh, Jr., Joseph Bryan, Thomas N. Page, W. R. Trigg, Robert H. Steger. Randolph Bolling, Walker Hill, Jackson Guy, E. P. Hudgins, James Anderson, and Merchant Weisiger.

In the death of D'Arey P. Morton, which occurred day before vesterday morning, in New York, in the thirtieth year of his age, Richmond and Virginis, his native city and State, sustain a less which time will not diminish. Stricken, as he was, in his early prime, he had already made his mark as a man of distinguished business parts, where ability has need of its full complement of powers, and had been entrusted with large enterprises. Had he lived he would undoubtedly have made his name and place among the highest.

A University education, followed by a period spent and the exactions of a banking-house and a large commission business, had developed his remarkable powers, and had trained him admirably for the broader field to which he was called in New York. The same steadfast devotion to business and to every trust confided to him marked his course in his new field, and his sterling qualities were steadily advancing him, when the dread summons came which has deprived Virginia of a noble and devoted son. He had but just married, and life lay before him like a pleasant land.

Perhaps no young man ever raised in Richmond had more numerous or more devoted friends than D'Arey Morton. Although reserved himself, he yet possessed an overflowing sympathy with all mankind which bound men to h'm.

Upright by inheritance, he impressed every one at once with his sincerity, his beneaty, and his maniners. Brave tender honesty, and his maniness. Brave, tender, generous, patient, strong, earnest, true, he was a man of the highest type, and as such he left his impress on every one whom he met. He was a sincere Christian, and throughout life had shown that heaven on earth, a mind that did ever "move in charity, rest in Providence, and turn on the pales of truth."

Who is Elected?

Yesterday the returns of the recent election in King William county were canvased by the State Board, when the following vote was found certified by the county clerk of King William: H.J. Lewis, 844; A. T. Mooklar, 747. From this certified statement it appears that Mr. Lewis was elected member of the House at the late special election. It, however, does not tally with the returns, and it is evidently a mistake of the clerk, who transposed the names. The State Board will meet to-day and make a further canvass of the returns. Maimed Confederate Soldiers and the

To the Editor of the Dispatch:
Your correspondent "Confed," in Thursday's paper, was right in advising the Legislature to make an additional appropriation to meet the amount due wounded soldiers.

It is neither in a spirit of "gush" nor from fnotives of interest that I endorse his suggestion. Equality is equity, and the action of the Legislature in paying some of the soldiers creates a demand on the part of others, who, equally deserving, failed, for want of funds, to receive their share. The amount is small that each receives, it is true, but small as it is the crippled soldier feels he is unjustly treated in withholding it from him.

The disgrace of our age and country is the way in which the Mexican soldiers have been treated by Congress. No man doubts that their right to a pension stands upon as high grounds as that granted to the soldiers of the late war, yet year after year death diminishes their numbers and an ungrateful country fails to recognize their claim. The tail tigure of Jefferson Davis appears before each congressman, and every sentiment of justice, like the courage of Bob Acres, oezes out the end of his fingers. I trust no sach figure is before our Legislature, and that justice will promptly be done our boys in gray."
